lead·er /lēdər/ noun

1. a person or thing that leads
2. a guiding or directing head, as of an army, movement, or political group
3. Patrick Lencioni

What is it:

A half-day event designed to help participants learn and apply all aspects of Organizational Health.

Who should attend:

Leaders, managers and practitioners who are passionate about teamwork, leadership and organizational clarity, and want to tap into the power of Organizational Health in the organizations where they work and serve.

What will happen there:

Pat will make the overwhelming case that Organizational Health “will surpass all other disciplines in business as the greatest opportunity for improvement and competitive advantage.” Drawing on his 20 years of consulting experience to some of the world’s leading organizations and utilizing some of the key models from his best-selling books, Pat will reveal valuable insights and steps to achieve long-term sustainable success.

A portion of the proceeds will support the Boys and Girls Club of the North Valley.
